Meredith has dual qualifications in psychology and theology and, in March 2010, will submit her PhD in theology at the Australian Catholic University (Melbourne) on the topic, "Hearing the Call of God." While Meredith has given up her private practice as a clinical psychologist, for many years she worked with clients at the interface of psychology and spirituality. She now seeks to serve in whatever way God calls, her primary concern being to facilitate the healing that enables both the discernment of God's will and the peace, joy and fulfillment that comes from a life lived to the glory of God.
